

I feel very strongly that for Sinclair Broadcasting to require their radio stations to air "Stolen Honor" just days before the election is another clear example of the dangers of media consolidation. They continually air extreme right wing viewpoints without balancing with similarly extreme left wing viewpoints.

All radio and TV uses publically owned airwaves free of charge, and are obligated by law to serve the public interest. But when large companies like Sinclair control the airwaves, we get material biased by what's good for the bottom line and opposed to what citizens need for a healthy functioning democracy.

Sinclair's actions show why we need to strengthen media ownership rules, not weaken them. Thank you.
